Gershow Recycling is a leading buyer of scrap metals and one of Long Island's oldest and most successful environmental companies, whose mission is; Conserving the Future, by Recycling the Past.

Founded in 1964, Sam Gershowitz recognized that Long Island had a growing solid waste problem and could do something about it. As a result, Gershow Recycling went to the region's landfills to literally mine thousands of tons of cars that had been entombed there because they felt they could be recycled.

Today, Gershow Recycling operates a modern, technically advanced metal processing recycling facility in the United States. Their modern equipment and ability to meet new recycling industry needs, reflects their commitment toward providing the finest service possible to their customers. Gershow operates 8 facilities throughout Long Island, New York area, employing over 200 Long Islanders.

Gershow purchases scrap metals and paper products at top prices; such as junk cars, trucks and buses; scrap iron, aluminum, copper, brass, tin cans, copper bearing scrap, electric motors, fuel storage tanks, appliances, corrugated cardboard, waste paper and all other metal products, manufacturing them into high quality scrap products for recycling.

Gershow Recycling is a processor of ferrous and non-ferrous metals, as well as paper products, producing ferrous, non-ferrous and paper grades in customer-specified forms, including baled, sheared, and shredded.

Gershow never loses sight of the fact that, no matter what high-tech equipment comes along, it is their unmatched service and competitive prices that keep their customers coming back year after year.

Gershow believes how they act reflects directly on their customers, playing an active role in the Long Island community, funding grassroots environmental programs that promote recycling and environmental conservation. Gershow also supports several community and youth programs providing a scholarship award to several graduating students each year pursuing engineering or environmental studies.

Gershow also supports Long Islands' emergency services, regularly donating vehicles and providing the use of its facilities to local fire and ambulance companies for training exercises.
